The bresolution, however, was only momentary. With characteristic German obstinacy the Germans again pressed forward and attacked the French infattly which occupied the terraced road below the headquarters of Gen. Chanzy.

An Orderly Rectress,
It soon became evident that the French would be unable to withstand the heavy changes made by their enemy. Novertheless the struggle was exceedingly obten the and well maintained a steady fire up. 24-man line, successfully covering the reviest. Hopeful of the Morrow.

The mounted batteries on Mount Morency are ready to ryceive them, and will probably open fire to-day directly on St. Dennis, which it is intended to destroy as a warning to Paris. Probably by next Sunday the sepulchre of the Kings of France will be demoished. Four hundred and fifty shells were thrown into Paris yeaterday. And having acquired too, a number of daughters, along with when it becomes necessary to adjudicate upon such commercial and legal relations —and there are many causes of this nature pending in the different courts—the first question to be considered is, when the war quantity of other live stock, for which he was anxious to find a market, he deter that would be worth riding several mile the cost he was shocked, as sensitive na tures very often are, at the large amount of noney necessary to carry out his plans. He was not to be driven, however, into the Government of the United States and the Southern States then in a state of insurcowardly abandonment of his enterpris without a powerful effort to accomp ; and, after prayerfully considering the matter for several days, he came to the conclusion that if he could some how or other accumulate the wo sections, and all the country was ablaze war which, by its own force and effect, dissolved the business relations between necessary quantity of nails without having to pay for them, he could manage to ge the citizens of the North and South until the 13th of July, 1861.

This act authorized the President to issue a proclamation, declaring the inhabiingly, he went to work to procure the nails without paying for them. It was certainly a long and tedious job to be un-dertaken by a man at his time of life—for thereupon "all commercial intercourse by and between the same and all the he was fifty if he was a day-but by vigor ously and persistently seating himself on a nail kee every time he went to one of citizens thereof and the citizens of the rest of the United States shall cease, and be unlawful, so long as such condition shall the stores in the village and shoveling a handful or two into his coat-pocket while the store keeper was looks The particular case out of which these

On the 15th and 19th of April, 1861, President house, a structure that was the admiration of the whole country for miles around; and but for a little incident that happened the day he moved toto the new building LINCOLN declared that insurrection existhis happiness would have been complete On that day the store-keepers, several in number, who had obtained and kept the hang of the situation from the start, sent claring their ports under blockade. On the 23d of April, 1861, the company in which MATHEWS was a pariner accepted in their bills for the nails. The old gen tleman, seeing at a glance how the thing stood, acknowledged the hominy without a word, and took a series of receipts in

The court below gave plaintiff judgment for the full amount claimed, and MATHEWS appealed. The Appellate Court held that, as the inmember, had a majority in the county, he was satisfied that he had but to become a candidate to be elected. He accordingly became a candidate. And now let the kleptomanlacs of the shricking sisterhood attain to the dignity of war until July 13, mark what followed. One fine morning this candidate for the General Assembly whose nails had come so near costing him nothing, threw himself carefully into a lot of his best clothes and started out for the Ews was liable on the draft dated April 28, 1861, but not upon the other instruments of January and February, 1862. It this opinion shall be generally concurred in by other courts, it follows that purpose of electioneering among his fellow citizens. On the outskirts of the village he encountered, as he rode along, a wall on which was pasted a placard whose sole contracts between citizens of the different business it was to admonish the people to "Vote for QLD NAILS!" A little 13, 1861. This is the date fixed by the decision in question. But does not the a state on there turned up another placard, which shouted in letters half a foot high, "Hurrah for OLD NAILS!" And the further he penetrated into the bowels of the village the thicker of the two great departments of the Govrnment, the legislative and executive? As the proclamation above referred to was not issued until the 16th of August, 1861, these placards became, all vigorously elenot issued until the 16th of August, 1861, will not that be the date fixed as the one, anterior to which the commercial relations between the clizens of the different sections were not disturbed when the exigencies of cases hereatter to be adjudged shall reduce the question to one of days and hours, as did not happen in this case? If the President's proclamation of April, the President's proclamation of April, 1861, declaring a state of insurrection, had not the effect of discolving these commercial relations, could the act of Congress of July 13, until followed up by the President's proclamation thereon of August 16, 1861? We are inclined to think that the latter date will be finally fixed upon as the president will be finally fixed upon as the president's proclamation of April, that to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the party of his rascality are returned to remind the science of election, the fixed that they had degraded the science of election they had degraded the science of election.

The entire book is exceedingly interesting and valuable; not only as presenting a faithful put are of the hardy hunter and trapper, whose wild nature will not permit him to endure the restraints of civilization, but as giving curious information concerning Indian habits and ensions from an made view. The book is fall of details of the fight and the chee; and the manner in which the red man overcomes the difficulties of his surroundings is most clearly and admirably shown. From it one can learn how the Indian makes his bows, his arrows, his moccasion, and all his ornaments and trappings. There is a freshness of the untutored wilderness in the style of the book that the wilderness in the style of the book that the citize has wheely retained and which makes so clock, has his correspondence brought wilderness in the style of the book that the delitor has wheely retained and which makes the reading of it a thing of delight and unalloyed satisfaction. It is interesting to notice for the life of this man, whose spirit seems to have reverted to the original stock of the savage, how, strong the force of early training and prejudice is. He cenil deliterately wound the tender hearts of loving parents and dear sisters by running away; he could forget the principles of plety installed into his heart in early years and commit bigamy with dirty, greasy squaws; he could into his heart in early years and commit bigamy with dirty, greasy squaws; he could actually eat dog-soup and learn to love it, but he coulde't raise pupples for his own table. There is where he felt he owed it to his race to draw the line, and there he drew it. The book is freely flustrated and the cuts, that show the various Indian implements and that are explanatory of Indian enatops, are exceedingly good; these, we presume, are the hone, is which reference is made in the preface as being from the hand of the author, and show evidences ornstarris skill and talent, remarkable in a man whose heads could hardly have been familiar with anything but his riffe, his kuife, and the raw-kide larias of his half-wide pooles for ears. The full roage pictures, of which there are more than enough, any quantity of goods on credit.

are by no means as meritorious either for their artistic design or execution. But we heartily recommend the book to all our read-ers as well worth perusal and sure of enter-taining and instructing them.

would be a farce were it not so deplorable. The right to vote excres with it the right to lave a cooldate. This we do not possess. The mere important offices of the country are so poorly paid, and of an 1 uncertain tenure, that the better class of men cannot be induced to fill them. And even if they were, a process to fill them. And even if they were, a process, called caucus, made up from corner groceries and lager-beer salcons, creates the candidate of the party, and not the candidate of the individual; and, if you vote at all, you have to vote for the nominee. In evry election the tumber of voters who abstain from exercising this privilege is enormous, and each year the number increases. After a time the entire business will have goue over to professional politicians and the ignorant mob they influence."

Thus it will be seen that thousands of people are annually placing themselves within the range of Louisville commercial inflance, and it will be well if our merchants observe closely these changes and extent their trade relations so as to resp a fair share of the wealth which Wessen commercial centers will reak if properly fangressed by their importance. Our Frankfort news this morning is interesting. Governor Stovenson is to resign in February and make Louisville his future home. The Circinnati railroad job is still reserved for further consideration, and the Interest bill would have passed the House but for a fillbustering man, curver. Of all superstitions those that grow out of a misunderstanding of political accommy are the most stubborn and ineradicable. There is reason, however, to hope that our Legislature will yet show some consideration for the unanimous opinion now advanced everywhere by Boards of Trade and other intelligent commercial bodies on this question of conventional interest.
